

Creator:

Howling Wolf

Date:

Pre-1874

Identifier:

T0382

Description:

In these two drawings, Howling Wolf depicts himself in his finest war regalia, overcoming his enemies with a lance. Both enemies are European-American, as illustrated by their accoutrements. The enemy mounted on a horse has a western-style saddle, and holds pistols in each hand. In the other drawing the enemy holds a rifle and two sticks which support his rifle during long-distance firing. The wound mark on Howling Wolf's rear leg is evidence that the enemy was partially successful. Despite this, the warrior-artist rushed his enemy under a hail of bullets and stabbed him with his lance. (also see T0381)
